Kathleen Graupman, a familiar face in the Greece Central School District, was approved Tuesday as the system's new superintendent of schools.

Greece school board president Sean McCabe announced the hiring of Graupman, who officially moves into her new role July 1. Graupman replaces Barbara Deane-Williams, who announced her retirement earlier this month after four years as the school district's superintendent, and 37 overall in education.

"I'd like to thank the board of education for this incredible opportunity," Graupman wrote in a statement on the district's website. "As many of you know, I was born and raised in Greece. I've had the good fortune of working positively with students, administrators, teachers, staff and community members across the district."

Graupman is the assistant superintendent for student learning and support services in Greece. She is a former elementary principal, assistant principal and administrative intern. Her career also includes experience as the director of K-12 Learning and Staff Development in the Hilton school district.
