

Webster super to leave for RCSD

Adele Bovard takes pay cut for new role

After leading the Webster schools for eight years, Superintendent Adele Bovard will step down and take a new job with the district in Rochester — a move that will bring a pay cut, but also a chance to help city students realize their potential, she said.

Bovard, 56, will become Rochester's deputy superintendent for administration.

The role pays $175,000 a year, said Chip Partner, a spokesman for the city schools. That's roughly 15 percent less

David Riley

Staff writer

See BOVARD, Page 12A

Adele Bovard, 56, is leaving her post as superintendent of schools in Webster after eight years to become the RCSD's deputy superintendent for administration.

Article Continued Below

See BOVARD on Page A12

Page Jump Loading

Powered by TECNAVIA

Copyright © 2014 Democrat and Chronicle 07/10/2014